I stalled in my steps
I heard scared screams of the sheeps
I looked on wondering What will be left when we're gone
Reduced to nothing under our own sky

Whisper 1: Sheep

As day meets the night
We will surface fighting for air
But in reality there is nothing more than the creeping darkness and the whispers of the lost ones

I shudder under the light as a scalpel goes through my guts
It wasn't supposed to be this painful mommy!
It wasn't supposed to be this painful
It wasn't supposed to be this It wasn't supposed to be
It wasn't supposed to
It wasn't supposed
It wasn't
It

Whisper 3: Painful

My cries are muffled
They won't find out
I'll be save
They won't find me
I'll go to bed, I said
I'll sleep like good children
They won't be angry
I'll be save

Whisper 4: Good Child

I shut my eyes and breathe
The sun lighting my features I look at you and your restful silhouette, peacefully sleeping all our troubles buried

And still, the world awakes bringing life to new and old The problems shifting beneath rumbling just under the surface while you hold me close

There's no whispers tonight Just scrambled thoughts that all lead to nowhere

Yet I'm awake in my car starting the engine one more time before it's too late

I drive as I wonder Where do these thoughts go after I use them

After everything
Is there anything that can be found again
